Mr. and Mrs. Paul Thornhill visited Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Allen, of Amherst Friday evening.

Homemakers Items

Planning to rearrange furniture this fall? Comfort and convenience are two of the most important factors to consider, says Katherine Habel, VPI house furnishings specialist.

Proper planning will eliminate much reshuffling of furniture and just possibly prevent strained relations with the less half of the family. Sketch the room on graph paper. Then locate traffic lanes. Movement within the room and to other rooms should be noted. Traffic lanes should be kept open and as direct as possible.

Note just what is desired as a center of interest in each room, says Miss Habel. It may be the mantel, a picture, a bookshelf, or a new folding screen.

Settle on what activities will go on in the room. One area may be for a conversation group. Space will be needed for family members and additional space for guests. Each person will want to look at the others and talk without shouting.

A space of nine feet is desirable for a conversation grouping. A table is needed on which to put things. Remember Conservation thrives around a dinner table because the furniture and its arrangement affords an ideal closeness. Keep this in mind when planning other conversation groupings.

A reading area is another good idea. Plan for seating which gives adequate support for the back. Balanced light should cover the room and concentrate fairly intensely. However, diffused light on the reading material is a must. Choose a spot away from household traffic lanes and noisy areas, the specialist suggests.

Some families will wish a music area. A radio tuner and record player with record storage conveniently near the major seating areas add much to such an area.

Quiet, indoor games are enjoyed by many families. They are most relaxing when played on a well-lighted table about 27 inches high, with straight hard chairs, and in a spot free from distractions.

Dancing and other active games need plenty of space, a durable floor, and furniture which can be easily pushed out of the way. A family room may be a good solution to this problem.

Outdoor space for outdoor games helps in getting the family outside, thus saving indoor furnishings. How much this is used will depend on the family.

Substitute honey for sugar in preparing cinnamon toast, candied vegetables, salad dressings, baked ham, baked apples, custards, puddings, and pies. It can also be used in quick breads, cakes, and confections.

Do you throw out a lot of old coffee in your home? Don't waste it. Sweeten it and add some plain gelatin, then mold, and you have a simple dessert. Serve with cream.

One tablespoon of cold water added to one egg white is equal to two egg whites.

Put layer of marshmallows on bottom of pumpkin pie, then fill. Marshmallows will come to the top and make a nice topping.
